Methods of Managing the Faculty

When the duty teacher opens the door to reprimand you and your cheerful guests for noise and may catch you enjoying a quiet game of bridge, have the presence of mind to meet her with a beautiful smile and a box of chocolates, leaving your guests to dispose of the cards under cover of your back.

When caught skipping after light bell, clap your hand to your cheek, dig you handkerchief into your eyes and with tears in your voice beg for something to ease "the worst toothache I ever had."

When sleepy next day after midnight spread and you have gone to your room for "just a half hour nap" and incidentally missed lesson period by oversleeping, go at once, before questioned, to the infirmary with a "blinding headache."

When a member of the Faculty is in the Library during study hall and seems restless or about to finish her story and discover that you have a magazine concealed in your notebook, take time by the forelock, busy yourself to find her fresh and absorbing amusement, whether Life or an interesting story. In any case, she will like the attention and, if you have luck in the selection, you will be able to continue your own story undetected.

When you don't feel like waiting until three o'clock to read the day's home news in the News and Observer remind the Librarian that you are studying civics and have been directed to keep up with the doings in the Legislature, in Congress, the Mexican and Balkan Wars.

However late you retire, do not forget the "five minute bell" in the morning and be sure to put your bonnet cap, middie, bedroom slippers and a thick dark skirt within easy reach of your downy couch. If you can form the habit of sleeping in your stockings it will be a great help.

If you see the Lady Principal looking at your bedroom slippers at breakfast do not go near her, but begin to limp and make for the back dining room door and infirmary staircase; the L. P. will not follow, and you will be able to escape by the front infirmary door.

When you have gone to the infirmary "just for a rest" and loathsome, unneeded medicines seem unavoidable, it sometimes works to start a new and juicy piece of gossip in confidence to your Nemesis. If you choose an interesting tale the fatal hour for administering may pass, and then you can swear that you have already had your dose.

While studying in Chapel, if you want any favors, remember that we are all sisters in femininity, therefore hasten to the one in charge and whisper to her some compliment from a "gentleman." Return to your seat—wait five minutes in order to let the "compliment" soak in—then go forward and make your request; it will probably be granted.

If you have managed, without detection, to spend all your study hour time writing the "daily" to your suitor, you suddenly remember an exam posted for next day "that you just have got to cram for," provide yourself with a candle, remove enough clothes from the closet to make room for yourself, and after light bell betake yourself there and pull down the curtain—you will be able to study until morning, if you wish, undisturbed by anything but rats.

When crossing Capitol Square Sunday morning after a basketball game (best game of the season) and you know your best out of town suitor is waiting to see you march through the Square, get right behind the L. P., stick out your hand sideways and he will be able to shake it as you pass by.

If, when serenaders come, you have been forbidden to clap or make a sound of applause, open your shutters and stand in the bright moonlight, or if there is no moonlight, arlight, and wave your hands vigorously back and forth in the motion of clapping. This will be almost as effective as the real thing.

When caught laughing too loud after light bell and you hear the duty teacher approaching on tiptoe, jump quickly out of bed, kneel, and apply yourself to your devotions. Apologies will be made in a whisper and you will be left undisturbed.

In chorus class, when the director accuses you of not looking "directly at her," plead that when nervous you get cross eyed.

When you're about to be caught laughing aloud Sunday night, snatch for your Bible and tell the duty teacher, when she appears, that you are laughing to think how Jonah must have looked when the whale got through with him.

Mary Spencer.

The Whys of the Freshman

Oh, why are rules so hard to learn,
Oh, why are teachers very stern,
Oh, why are lessons hard to get,
Oh, why are teachers easy to fret,
    Oh, why, why, why?

Oh, why can't we answer the teachers with sass,
Oh, why not allowed to talk out on class,
Oh, why is the store so far, far away,
Oh, why are we told not to go that way,
    Oh, why, why, why?

Oh, why can't we sleep through breakfast too,
Oh, why is that only for Seniors to do,
Oh, why is "skipping" so very wrong,
Oh, why do restrictions last so long,
    Oh, why, why, why?

Oh, why is the goal so far away,
Oh, why can't we reach it without such delay,
But when we do reach it, though now we're called green,
We will blossom with honors as never were seen—
    So there, there, there!

Sophomore Poem

I

Last year all our doings were nightly,
Our feasts were secret and quiet;
When we "skipped" we always slept lightly—
For fear of a Sophomore riot.

II

Oh, we were quite bold when alone,
Our meetings were noted for noise,
Louise would demonstrate "quick blacking,"
Ethel declaim about "boys."

III

This year our deeds have been dreadful,
Our feasts have been numerous and swell,
They'd never begin 'till four a. m.
And end with the rising bell.

IV

We always know our lessons.
In Math Elizabeth does fine—
She can almost convince poor innocent Nan
That  $\tan A$  is equal to  $5 \cos \text{sine}$ .

V

In History class 'tis a marvel
To hear Gladys and Lois recite,
They even contradict Miss Womble,
Which she says isn't very polite.

VI

In reciting Lucille is a wonder,
She "elocutes" in a lofty style;
The audience is convulsed with laughter—
It is impossible for them to hide a smile.

VII

With hopeful heart and head held high—
Pansy slowly wends her way,
She is by chance our most studious member
And never believes in play?

VIII

The last remaining member
Of this illustrious crew
Is poor overworked Anna Morgan
Who had all this writing to do.

IX

Thus have we gained, until we've obtained
An esteemed place in college
Till at length, our mental strength,
Is the Faculty's source of knowledge.

Junior Class History

Our class history really began with last year, as none of us were ever "fresh," at least in this school. We will never have the pleasure or experience of being Freshmen. But we will survive to tell how narrowly the Freshmen escaped from us when in our first year we proudly entered the Sophomore Class.

The Class of '11 has kept up a good fight from the very beginning, in spite of the fact that only a small number hope to share the glorious victory which we are all looking forward to. As every one of you know that our class only consists of five small girls and also that the finest fabric is made into the smallest package, you can readily see why we are proud of the size of the class.

It was in the fall of 1912 that we had our first meeting together as Sophomores, which led us entirely to ignore the warnings of the Juniors and Seniors and not even fear under any circumstances the consequences. We were headed in the right direction and therefore tried to prevent anything from stopping or even trying to pull us backwards in our march.

Then the day came, which we all happily remember as the day when we became members of such a triumphant class as the Junior Class. We were not only proud of being just members but obtaining those privileges due us seemed far more worthy. Being Juniors has increased our desire to become fearless more than ever, until we have grown so much stronger that sometimes others really heed us rather than heeding ourselves.

We have no fear that any oncoming class will outdo us in courage, because we are relying upon the excellent judgment of our President. We, after all, have something to live for and look forward to in the coming year. At the close we want to be sure and note how fortunate we are in the personnel of our class, and also how fortunate in having such excellent girls to perform the offices of the class.

Nellie—we love her with all our hearts. As President of our class, and for the loyalty and devotion with which she has filled this office we honor and admire her. Two laughing brown eyes seldom bespeak worry or trouble over her heavy course, but often tell tales to those girls who happen to be in the same parlor with her on calling afternoon.

Tarboro, N. C.

Dear little Bessie, quiet and retiring, pores over her analogy in a most uncommunicative manner. As President of Y. W. C. A. she keeps us in the strait and narrow path, probably due to this diligent study of morals. Her sunny disposition will not be ruffled even when certain fun-loving girls twice her size put her in the waste barrel.

ANNIE READE LEWIS, B.L.S.

Whiteville, N. C.

Another intellectual maid. The President of our student body has won the respect of both girls and Faculty with her frank and outspoken manner. Her popularity is shown by the many honors she has been given. The meaning of Annie Reade's favorite expression—which we haven't her permission to mention—is sometimes misconstrued by Faculty and her Senior dignity is questioned; still, we feel she is thoroughly appreciated by all.

What would Miss Womble do without her walking encyclopedia! For there is nothing in the book that Mittie doesn't know. How vast and mighty a mind she has shown by the voluminous size of her notebooks—how we long for them! She moves calmly and unmolested along life's pathway. The Senior Class could not do without her.

Meek, modest and good. The whole class would do well to take Mary for example. If this had been thought of sooner probably Miss Coley would not have had so much trouble keeping quiet in Chapel. Though a famous History student, how queer that she should care so much for Fresh Math! Sweet and sincere as one could make her, she will always go through life helping and giving pleasure to others.

Clara always does the best thing in the best way at the best time, so how can we help loving her? Her lovely character and charming ways have won a place for her in every heart at Peace. Her worst habit is that she can not resist the temptation of returning the smiles of a certain young man who strolls by on Sunday afternoons. But we do look for great things from our Class Prophet, and we all join in wishing that her future may be as great a success as her past.

SARAH ELEANOR TILLAR, PIANO, ENGLISH CERTIFICATE
Emporia, Virginia

Here comes Eleanor, with her ceaseless chatter, the airiest Senior we could possibly find. "Variety is the spice of life," reads the old adage, but this fair lady is a firm believer in specialties, and has adopted "G. G." and music as her favorites. May she be as successful in the former as she has been in the latter, for we have an idea that she will not "tarry" long in "single blessedness."

ELIZABETH RUTH MCGEE, PIANO

Elizabeth has won many friends with her sweet and sincere disposition. She is always ready with a quick sympathy for any of us in trouble, especially when practice hour comes and we feel slightly indisposed. She has shown much musical ability, and no small amount of praise is due her for her perseverance along this branch of work.

Senior History—Class of 1913

It was in September, 1909, when the Class of 1913 entered into college life at Peace. We were, indeed, a group of inexperienced girls numbering thirteen, and this number has become smaller each succeeding year. We met so many girls that it was some time before we were able to make any discrimination; each wondered if all the others were upperclassmen. After learning our surroundings, we began to pass our first year as do all Freshmen. It was nothing unusual to be called upon by the Sophomores for accommodations on every occasion. Both Sophomores and Juniors caused many clouds to hang over us, and were always accusing us of jealousy. But never will we forget that night when we had to trudge along to study hall because we were not allowed to attend the reception given by the Y. M. C. A. of the A & M College. Our sorrow, however, was turned to joy when the Lady Principal, who took pity on us, gave a delightful entertainment in our honor. After that, we were no longer the subjects for jokes by the "Sophs," who had become so conceited over winning the Thanksgiving basketball game. One of them was even heard to say, "I do wish I were a Freshman." Two other events were the annual banquets given by the literary societies.

The latter part of the year was spent in trying to solve the problem, "How to become Sophomores." Realizing that the gradations to Seniority were slow and difficult, and that each step must be mastered, we adopted for our motto, "Palma non sine pulvere"—No palm without dust.

After three months of recreation we returned with only eleven members to be called Sophomores. Although the majority of our classmates did not return, their places were taken by others who had the same aspirations as those left behind. We felt our importance of no longer being Freshmen, but Sophomores, the "Rulers of the Kingdom of Peace." We had said, in our Freshman year, that when we became Sophomores we would not fail to command the Freshies "to wait on us," but we followed in the footsteps of our predecessors. For information, ask the Class of 1912. We were determined, this year, to accomplish something outside the regular course of study, so found our achievement on the athletic field. There it was that we were the winners of the pennant. This victory resulted in the organization of a Pennant Team.

Even realizing that we were one-half the distance to the goal, some of our classmates were not encouraged to continue, and the beginning of our Junior year found us with but nine members who were faithful and patient to the end. This year did not mean much for us in athletics for there were only a few games played, and those were not won by our class.

Feeling that we had the qualities so characteristic of a Junior—quietness and capacity for assimilating knowledge—we felt it more strongly when, in the latter half of the year, we were given the privilege of chaperonage. We were proud of having the President and the Secretary of our class chosen as delegates to the Student Council held in the Presbyterian College at Charlotte. Again, that our Secretary was sent as a delegate to the Y. W. C. A. Conference at Asheville. The most enjoyable event, which came as the climax, was the annual banquet given to the Seniors by the Juniors. Two great changes took place in the closing days of this year. The first and most important, was the resignation of Mr. Stockard—under whose presiding we had hoped to graduate; but as this could not be realized, Dr. Ramsey became the President, and has given us every possible assistance. The second was that of our Faculty member, who decided the task of advising nine was far too difficult as compared with that of advising one. Although strictly forbidden by the Class of 1912 that Miss Wallace should become the Faculty member of any succeeding class, we, knowing of no better choice, overstepped that decree and elected her for our adviser. As this, she has been a most efficient guide.

Finally, we arrived from that day of verdant Freshman to that glorious day of Seniorhood. Our class, as for literary ability, is represented by five members; for musical talent, by three; and for artistic talent, by one, who has applied for a third diploma and we have advised her to take a fourth, for she has sufficient time before 1916. This year we had two of our members on the Varsity team. The chief social function was the banquet given by the Pi Theta Mu and Sigma Phi Kappa Literary Societies to celebrate George Washington's Birthday. Although our class has been weak in number, it has been strong in ambition, which excited the enthusiasm that gave us the power to overcome all our obstacles.

Now that we have been conquerors thus far, and have reached the goal of our ambition, may we take the same spirit into the joys and trials of life. May we continue to have the high ideals actuated by our beloved Faculty, and profit by their influence and instruction. In bidding farewell, we say to them and trust that they will say to us in the words of our class flower, "Forget me not."

Last Will and Testament of the Class of 1913

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA }
COUNTY OF WAKE } CITY OF RALEIGH

PEACE INSTITUTE

May 19, 1913.

We, the members of the Senior Class of 1913 of Peace Institute, having survived four years of mental and physical contortion, and being in possession of certain valuable property and effects of which we wish to dispose shortly, do hereby make our Last Will and Testament.

First: To the Junior Class we do will our place as Seniors of Peace Institute, sincerely hoping that they will fill it not in quantity, but in quality; we also bequeath our privileges, and if these varied and many privileges prove too much for the Juniors at first, we propose that a good many be taken away from them.

Second: To the Sophomore Class we do will all original geometry examples, also our Bible History and English notebooks, so that the valuable time spent on them may not be wasted. We leave them, however, on the condition it be kept strictly quiet.

Third: To the Freshman Class we do bequeath the right of having as much fun as possible—midnight feasts are of course included in this gift, and we will be much disappointed if this privilege is not taken advantage of.

Fourth: To the Faculty we do will the right of having a Faculty meeting once a day, and of calling up the girls one by one, to reprimand or commend as they shall see fit.

Fifth: To the "Student Body" we do will our high aims and ideals, hoping that they, by much practice, will be able to decide all questions that may come up concerning affairs inside and outside of Peace, fairly.

Sixth: To the Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen who make ninety on all subjects we do will the right of studying in their rooms, but to those who fail to make the mark, we do will the chapel—knowing that its dull and uninteresting aspect will cheer their hearts day by day.

Seventh: To all who visit the Library for reference work, we do bequeath the right of getting magazines from the locked bookcases, and the right of spending their time lounging and entertaining themselves with interesting stories.

Eighth: Last, but not least, to that honored body, the Faculty, feeling that we can never repay them for their kindness, we do will them their salaries, and sincerely hoping these salaries will repay them for all their efforts which seem, at present, to have been wasted.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, we, the members of the Senior Class of 1913 of Peace Institute, do set hereby our names and seals, this 21st day of May, 1913.

Signed, sealed and published by Class of 1913, as its Last Will and Testament in the presence of the ones who have hereunto set their hands and seals as witnesses.

MARY WHITE.

Prophecy for Class of 1913

'Twas the fall of 1920. With a party of friends I had been traveling abroad, and we were then enjoying the beautiful scenery of the snow capped mountains of Switzerland.

Late one afternoon, while on an exploring expedition, I became separated from my companions, and at nightfall found myself surrounded by horrid shapes, and sounds most terrifying rent the air. Recognizing a human voice in the distance, I eagerly ran in the direction whence it came, and stumbling blindly along I slipped and fell. Rising, I found myself before a cave from the entrance of which a dim light flickered. A huge black robed figure walked back and forth, and I realized that from this terrible place came the human voice.

On drawing near, I recognized in the strange form an augur of human destinies, who was reading from a huge book which lay open before him; he was walking back and forth evidently repeating what he had read, so interested in his musings that it was necessary in some way that I attract his attention, so I placed myself directly in his path saying:

"Tell me, venerable sire, what it is that so absorbs you?" Being answered that it was a book of human destinies, I again asked:

"Is it possible to find out the future of my classmates of 1913?" In hollow tones he answered:

"Since you are so brave as to enter my realm, I will grant your request." Turning to a section of the huge volume he read:

"Nellie Graves, your Class President, as a reward for distinguished services, and for being prominent among those who have effected the adoption of Equal Suffrage in North Carolina, has been appointed leader of the suffrage parade at the inauguration of the President-elect, Miss Ada V. Womble. She has also been mentioned in suffrage circles as a probable member of the cabinet."

Awd by the greatness to which Nellie had attained, I asked in a meek little voice:

"And Bessie Jackson?"

"After graduating from Pence, she decided to go to Wellesley, and from there carried away the highest honors. Then following out her original purpose in life, she sailed for the Orient, where she is now initiating the little Chinese boys and girls into the mysteries of phonics.

"Annie Reade Lewis, as a co-ed in Cornell, found her mind so capable of keeping pace with the masculine intellect, that she determined to go against traditions forbidding the fair sex to engage in politics, and took up the study of law. So successful was she in winning laurels as well as cases that she soon convinced the world that some women are pre-eminently fitted for the bar. However, a young physician brought suit against her and won. This was Annie Reade's first defeat and last case.

"Mittie Hill, soon after graduating, became an influential club woman in Raleigh, interested in all phases of the city welfare work, paying especial attention to those improvements which helped to lighten the burdens of the college girls and boys. By introducing electric busses into Raleigh for the use of poor school girls, she did a noble deed. The Peace girls will always thank her for adding to the timeworn customs of the institution, a social event held twice a year—a ball given in the Auditorium for the Peace girls and A & M boys only. Her fame as the instigator of all that is noble and good rests secure among college students in Raleigh.

"Mary White, who showed while at school so great a liking for the sciences, decided that she would become an active member of the Audubon Society, devoting her life to the protection of birds. Her strongest efforts were made in behalf of the waterfowl of North Carolina, most especially that of the White Crane.

"Elizabeth McGee, the shining musical genius of your class, has determined to devote her whole life to her art. In the fall of 1913, therefore, she went to Germany to study under one of the most renowned professors, and is now one of the most prominent of the younger pianists. She has composed moreover, several beautiful concertos, the most celebrated being, Mrbrawleyouarewantedatthephone.

"Eleanor Tillar, after making her debut, reigned supreme as the society belle of Richmond. Having brought every man with whom she came into contact to adoration of her charms, asking for her hand, she encountered her only difficulty in that she had not hands enough to bestow. She solved the problem, however, by eloping with a promising young banker and is now living happily in Raleigh.

"Mabel Pugh, the artist of your class, decided that her calling lay along the line of caricaturing. She devoted all her energies to this purpose, and soon won much fame. Her daring political cartoons have become very famous, and her work is in great demand, not only all over the United States, but in European nations as well."

I would not have been human had I not been curious concerning myself. In response to my inquiries, the augur motioned me to the awful Book of Fates. With beating heart and trembling hand I turned the page and read in burning letters:

"Clara Armstrong's matrimonial schemes have been a failure." Too horrified to read further, I sank unconscious to the ground. How long I lay in this condition I shall never know. Gradually I became conscious, and felt myself being carried from the cave, and on opening my eyes, I found myself in the hands of rescuers. They carried me back to our tents, and soon afterwards I left that part of the country, too stirred by my experience to enjoy it any longer.

PROPHET.

Studying for "Trig" Examination

Time: 4:30

Setting: Room 72

Characters: Two members of Trigonometry Class

BESSIE: Come on here, Maud, and let's study. 'Cause you know we just can't afford to "flunk." Put up that Busy sign.

MAUD: All right, I'm coming. Where're we going to start? At the beginning?

BESSIE: No, let's start over there at those abominable formulas. "Tangent A is equal to—" Say! can you prove that?

MAUD: No, indeed, I never could see any sense in those things. Miss Love says they're easy as dirt but I'm such a peanut-head, just know I'm going to "flunk."

BESSIE: I'm too, but that doesn't count up here. "Tangent A is equal to—"

MAUD: Say, Bessie, are you going to the show tomorrow night? I don't know whether to go or not. If it didn't cost so much—

But here what Maud intended doing was interrupted by a knock at the door (and over the Busy sign too.)

BESSIE: Come in!

FLORENCE (from the outside): No, you are busy—I can't come in. Come to the door a minute. Please open the store for me. I want a package of gum.

MAUD (who suddenly had an inspiration to study): Oh, go on, Florence, and get some one else to open it for you. We are studying.

FLORENCE: Well; I'll try and if I can't I'll come back.

MAUD: Have you ever seen the way these girls call over Busy signs. It makes me positively ill.

BESSIE: Me too, but let's study some more. Let's don't try to prove those old things. Don't believe she will give them to us anyway. We'll just trust to luck.

MAUD: No, I don't believe she will either. Let's try that seventeenth example on page seventeen. I bet a nickel she will give us that one. She stressed it so much on class.

BESSIE: Where is it? "Given  $22^{\circ} 30'$  equal to square root—" Oh, don't you remember? I copied that one from the board the day Miss Love worked it. Wish I could find it. Guess it's in that box somewhere.

Before the example could be found there came a knock at the door.

FLORENCE: Bessie, I couldn't find a soul. Laura's busy and Nell and Clara are off "easing" somewhere. Couldn't find any of the others.

BESSIE: All right, just a minute. Maud, you look in that box for that example. It's on yellow paper somewhere.

Ten minutes later. Maud in the meantime begins an exciting story in the new Blue Book. The example still unfound.

BESSIE: Well! that is over and I can study again. What do you think? I have found that old example in my book.

MAUD: Let me see it.

Silence for five minutes.

BESSIE: Oh! look Maud, who is that man coming up the walk? He sure is good looking, isn't he?

MAUD: Oh jinks! it's Jack Harris, Jean's fellow that's coming this afternoon. "Gee! I wish I had a fellow like the other girlies have."

BESSIE: My sentiments exactly. He's got a box of candy too. You bet I'm going to see Jean at skipping period.

MAUD: Dare you to wave at him.

BESSIE: You're crazy. But I just can't take a dare. Will if you will.

MAUD: You bet I'm game. Oh look! he's waving too. I bet he thinks you're Jean.

BESSIE: Thank you. But do you know it's half-past five and we haven't done a thing yet.

MAUD: We've got two hours to study tonight and besides I'm not in any notion to study now anyway.

JEAN (bursting in): Girls! do you know Jack came and Dr. Ramsey wouldn't let me see him. I'm so mad I could "bust." He said, "No, under no circumstances can the girls have young men callers during 'exam' week." I think it is just mean in him and I haven't another—

MAUD: Where's the candy?

JEAN: Didn't see any candy or anything else, I was so mad.

BESSIE: Poor fellow, he must have been so heartbroken and frightened he gave it to Dr. Ramsey.

Jean goes out slamming the door. The excitement being over the studying begins again. Silence for two minutes.

BESSIE: I wish these horrid things were over. They don't show what you know anyway. I know—

MAUD: They certainly don't. I know lots more about this stuff than I will be able to put on my paper tomorrow. I get so scared.

BESSIE: Well, this is my last and if I ever take another, I hope—

MAUD: You ought not to complain as this is your last year, but poor me, I've got another year of it.

BESSIE: Yes, I sure do feel for you. Wonder whose special delivery that is, I bet it's Eleanor's. She—

MAUD: Good guess! there goes that gong, which "spells" rolls and butter again. We certainly have been studying hard. I'm so tired, aren't you? Got a date for chapel? Go with me. So long! See you later.

A Treaty of Peace

In the days of King George the First, great was the stir in the land. A proclamation had gone forth that at the ringing of the Bell all the Fowlkes of the first Ward, the third Ward, and of the one that lay between, should gather together in the market place, there to answer to the King and to the stern eyed Bishop, whose long White Beard deepened the respect of the people towards him, for the waste of their water-Brooks. The depths of these the King had ordered to be preserved for his favorite fish, the Salmon, which lazily swam therein hour by hour, fanning the water with its broad Gill, and leaping for the water spider, whose Webblung close above the surface. When, therefore, they had assembled, the herald charged them thus:

"Know ye that the Fowlkes have been wont in the use of a certain public Faucette to let the water run upon the land, not only depriving the Salmon of his haunts, but laying desolate the surroundings, and despoiling a certain tract of its natural beauty, so that all was like to return to its primitive state of desolation."

In defense, therefore, of the Fowlkes, out spoke a brawny wight, a Smith, of Arm-strong, and Young withal:

"Oh, King," quoth he, "I speak for mine own. The Hand that turns the Faucette is not that of the living, but that of spirits which have left their Graves that they may plague us Moore than when on earth."

But up there rose the Miller, Holding a Bum in his Hand, crying out, "Thy mercy, oh! King, but what the Smith speaketh, that say I, is but a Swindell. On such and such a day in October last saw I the Taylor quench his thirst at this place, and go away deep in thought, smoking his Cobb pipe and forgetting to turn the Faucette."

To which the Taylor directly made answer: "Oh, King! 'tis true that on such and such a day in October last I did relieve my parched tongue of its thirst, but when that I had drunken of my fill, did I find the Faucette faultily made, so that it was in no wise easy to return to its proper position, and thus did the water run away to waste."

Up then rose the Smith in wrath: "My sovereign Lord, inasmuch as I, your favorite artisan, was charged with the making of this Faucette, did I it fashion of the purest brass, and with due care made it full fair and well shapen and with a Derriek hoisted it into place, to be a thing not only of use to us all, but as an ornament. Therefore know I that there was no fault in my Hand-i-work."

Hereupon Rose the Fowler, a man of great Worth and with a deep reverence rejoined:

“My liege, thou knowest well the Love I bear thee! I would therefore give thee of my Best service (though these few have spoken Brawley) that this trouble may be cleared away. Let the Taylor be relieved of this accusation, but let all the people know that we do consider not only the Taylor guilty of misdemeanor, but also the entire population of the three Wards. Also that another offense shall be sufficient to send them all to their Graves, or in perpetual exile to the unknown West.”

With these words was the King well pleased, and he did decree that it should be as the Fowler had advised. Then the Fowlkes returned once Moore to their homes, having been absolved by the Bishop who moreover dismissed them with the special blessing of the Pope.

Young Women's Christian Association

The work of the Young Women's Christian Association this year has been, as far as we can see, along very effective lines. The meetings are held in the parlors on Sunday evenings and are usually led by the girls. Every second Sunday the Missionary Committee takes charge of the service, different members of the Association giving reports from foreign fields.

At the beginning of the year great effort was made by the members of the Cabinet to make the new girls feel at home by meeting them at the trains and introducing them to one another. An information Bureau was also arranged in Central Hall for the benefit of the new girls. All information desired could be obtained from the girl at the Bureau.

The first meeting was announced in a very pleasing way. Sunday, at dinner, each girl found at her place a tiny roll of white paper tied with lavender and white ribbon. On the inside was written the time and place of the meeting.

The annual reception for the new girls was held on the second Saturday evening, September the twenty-second, and was an evening greatly enjoyed by all. A "District School" was held in Central Hall and everyone came dressed as school children. At "recess" sandwiches, pickles, and ginger cakes were served as lunch and on the porch was served punch.

Each year, before leaving for the Christmas holidays, the Association tries to make some one else feel the true Christmas spirit. This year we helped to pack a box for the children at the Barium Springs Orphanage.

On Thanksgiving night a party was given under the auspices of the Association. The refreshments consisted of bananas and apples and much pleasure was gotten by roasting marshmallows over the coals in the Library grate.

This year a store has been started by the Association and has proven quite a success as far as revenue is concerned as well as being very convenient.

On the first of May each year the May Day festivities take place on the campus. Attractive booths are arranged from which various refreshments are sold. In the midst of all stand the May poles, with their green and white and red and white streamers. At a short distance is a platform on which the Folk Dances are performed. This scene is viewed by our honored Queen and her attendants from her throne. The receipts are used for sending delegates to the Summer Conference at Blue Ridge, North Carolina. The Association has sent two delegates to Blue Ridge, two to the Students Council at Greenville and one to the Biennial Convention at Richmond, Virginia.

In every way we have striven to bring every phase of the work before the girls and to get them interested in it, always keeping the threefold purpose of the Association uppermost in our hearts.

Bill?

The evening of "initiation" is just about the most eventful evening "what is," and is looked forward to for weeks by both the old girls and the new ones, but in a very different way,—on one side with fear and awe, on the other with joy and glee.

The morning before the fatal night the girls are awakened early by the bleating of a goat and immediately every hair on their heads stands straight up and continues in the same position until the "wee sma' hours" of the following morning. The goat is society property—has been for years, and consequently is well trained and is ever on his job. He was once in a sanatorium for tuberculosis and learned many selections from the inmates who took daily vocal exercises in order to perfect their lungs. This, together with the training he has received by his close association with Peace (from hearing the Chorus Class and Voice pupils practice) enables him to entertain the girls a whole day.

Bill is a fine specimen of his kind, has a peculiar sense of humor and thoroughly enjoys every moment of initiation. On the eventful night he performs his duty well and tosses his burden around as if she were a mere coin or beanbag. He is unusually stout and delights in hurling his victim high in the air and then running and getting under her before she hits the ground. He is somewhat reserved and refuses to become acquainted with the new girls until he has had some fun with them on initiation night, but he is the best friend a Peace girl can have and is as firm as Gibraltar.

The Colonial Banquet

An event which by far excelled any of the social functions of the year was the Colonial Banquet given by the two literary societies on the night of February the twenty-second, nineteen hundred and thirteen. The banquet hall was decorated with red, white, and blue, the pillars being twined with the colors, and from the top of each a festoon was artistically brought to the center and caught in the folds of a huge American flag. From one side of the hall the beautiful strains of Levin's Orchestra could be heard issuing from behind a huge bank of palms. This scene was enhanced by the mellow glow from hundreds of red candles. The tables were arranged in the shape of a swastika, and down the center of each ran a rope of green smilax, with here and there an American flag appearing in the mass. At each place were red hatchets, tied with red, white, and blue ribbon, as place cards, and tiny flags as souvenirs. The colonial scheme was further carried out by the girls being beautifully gowned in dresses of their great-grandmothers'. Martha Washington, Nellie Custis, and Dolly Madison were among the distinguished guests of the evening. An elegant five course banquet was served, the first consisting of grapefruit and maraschino cherries; the second, pressed chicken, beaten biscuits, tomatoes with mayonnaise dressing, sandwiches and pickles; the third, of chicken salad, olives and wafers; the fourth, cream and cake; the fifth, coffee and mints. Between the two last courses the time was pleasantly spent in the presentation of the gifts of the Presidents to each other, and a toast to Dr. Ramsey by Miss Maud Rankin, the President of the Sigma Phi Kappa Society, and to Miss Wallace by Miss Jean Ward, the President of the Pi Theta Mu Society. After the banquet all were ushered to the brilliantly lighted ballroom, where a most enjoyable dance was held until the late hour caused the orchestra to play "Home, Sweet, Home," and roombell brought us to a realization that we were still in school. Goodnights were reluctantly said and we were soon dancing only in dreams.

BANQUETS

(After The Feast)

A Midnight Experience

I tiptoed down the dark hallway
A mile or two it seemed—
And down the creaky stairs I crept
To where a dim light gleamed.

I paused a minute by the door—
A breath, I should have said,
For why should I be standing there
And not before the spread?

There were other girls ahead of me—
I was afraid of that—
But started in with right good will
Until there came a—rat!

Beds, chairs, and trunks were jumped upon,
The light rolled to the floor—
When with a candle in her hand
A teacher oped the door.

Oh, Shakespeare! had you only known
The joys of such a feast—
You had not written half your plays,
Or shortened them, at least.

A Library Scene

"Girls! if you are going to stay in here, you must be quiet or I'll certainly report you. Miss Womble has already instructed me to do so."

"Just let me say this, Selma, and I'll hush," replied Bessie.

"No! You're a Senior,—you should set a better example to the other girls."

"Pshaw! sour grapes; but I'm glad I'm not a Senior—all time being censured. Guess I can talk all I please. But you hush, now, for I feel an inspiration to work my Math," came from the depths of sofa pillows in the corner, where Louise had taken refuge for a nap.

A period of five minutes silence ensued, when the door burst open and Nell entered exclaiming:

"I think it's a shame! Doe's in town—and don't you know, they won't let me see him until after study hour and then for only thirty minutes."

"Sh-h-h-h-h-h-!! Nell, you'll have to go back to Chapel if you don't stop talking about Doe. I wish you girls had all improved like Anna has since Christmas. She really hasn't given me any trouble lately. I'm afraid she's going to die.

Anna, upon hearing her name called, suddenly roused from reading her novel, and responded:

"I'll swigger, the man in this book had an experience just like my daddy did one time—jus' let me tell." All eyes are turned towards Anna in anxious anticipation when, lo and behold! Mrs. Ramsey enters. Letters are hid, magazines stuffed under textbooks, everybody is absorbed in studying. For fear of disturbing the studious girls Mrs. Ramsey procures her magazine and departs, while Anna continues her wonderful narrative.

"One time my daddy went huntin' and while he was crossin' the river to kill a deer on the other side he was just a-fixin' to shoot it, and happened to look overhead and saw a wild turkey (pauses for breath). Hearing a noise close by he looked around and saw a big water moccassin—honest, I'm not joking, he was as big as an elephant. He shot at the moccassin; the gun busted, while the trigger pierced the brain of the turkey overhead, and the butt of the gun hit the deer and—"

"Please hush, Anna—I'm trying to study my Analogy," said Nellie.

"Then when daddy started back the boat turned over, and daddy had to swim clean back across the creek and when he came—"

"That's enough, Anna, if you don't stop telling your wonderful yarns in the library, I'll send you to Dr. Ramsey—"

"Oh, shut up, Selma! you are all the time breakin' in at the wrong time. I'll bet your mouth gets shaped like 'sh,' you say it so much."

Maud and Eleanor, returning from practice, make our party complete. Selma, disgusted, leaves, putting Bessie in charge, with the strict command to keep silence. Poor Bessie promises, but all in vain, for Maud, looking over the News and Observer, proceeds to tell us the happenings of the Legislature and Society items.

Ding dong!! Ding dong!!! goes the fire alarm. Everything comes to order. Windows are closed. Everyone files downstairs and is saved by Miss West and her brave fire lieutenants.

Of our fairest girls this is not the least,
For Anna Faucette is the "prettiest" at Peace.

If you doubt that Carrie Hashagen is the "handsomest" kind
Look at her picture and you will change your mind.

Maud Rankin is the "most popular" girl;
She sets all the hearts at Peace awirl.

Lara Finley, the "most capable" maid,
Possesses the ability for every trade.

The "best student" always conquers her book,
Nellie Graves, you see, has them under her foot.

If you want a girl you can depend upon,
Come to the "most reliable"—Bessie Jackson.

The "most original" is Louise Worth,
It must have started at her birth.

Nell Allen, with her winsome graces,
Is thought the "cutest" in all places.

Louise Beeason—so "jolly" and bright;
Look at her face and you'll laugh outright.

Martha Stevens, "neat" as a pin,
Imagines disorder would be a sin.

For zeal, arbor, earnestness and fun,
Look at Elizabeth Landon, the "most enthusiastic" one

The "best dancer" at Peace, Bessie Burge must be;
If you dance with her we think you'll agree.

“The Thirteen German Club Dance”

The Thirteen German Club gave their annual dance on Monday night, the third of March. This was one of the most enjoyable dances of the season, as all of the new dances were allowed. “The Boston Dip,” “The Turkey Trot,” “Bunny Hug,” “Grizzly Bear,” and the old waltz and two-step were among the favorites.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Levin's Orchestra and his music is always beautiful, touching the hearts of the girls with his dreamy waltzes and lively two-steps.

The young ladies never looked so pretty, all being gowned in the latest styles of evening dress and their hair dressed and ornamented in a manner which gave their eyes that bewitching look that attracts the young gentlemen.

The “young men” looked handsome in the full dress suits and it was said by one of the chaperones, “I have never seen the girls look so pretty, or the boys look so handsome.”

The dance continued until a late hour, when the band slowly began playing “Home, Sweet Home,” but they had to have one more dance. Applause gave them “Dixie” as an encore. The dance being over the young people left, declaring this to have been the happiest event of the season.

Jokes

MR. STOCKARD (teaching Senior English class): "Miss Bessie, give a sentence using jet."

BESSIE J—— "Cape Fear 'jets' out into the water."

ANNA FACETTE asked Miss West on Junior English: "Did Milton write Gray's Elegy?"

MISS WOMBLE: "Louise Worth, give me a sentence using income."

LOUISE: "I started to skip and in come a teacher."

MISS WOMBLE (in Psychology): "Now Mary, will you give us a syllogism?"

MARY W.: "All men are animals, all monkeys are animals; therefore all men are monkeys."

MRS. MOORE (exercising on campus): "I haven't skipped for twenty years. It puts new life into one."

MISS RAMSEY (in astonishment): "Skipped what?"

MISS WEST: "Nan Lin, when did William the Conqueror come to America?"

Why is Sallie Webb so stubborn?

Because she thinks you will get a "Derrick" to move her.

Why are Clara and Nell called the "Siamese Twins"? When you pinch Nell, Clara screams.

LUCY FOWLKES (on Physiology): "Alcohol is almost as bad for the human soul as whiskey."

MRS. MOORE: "John, please look at the thermometer and tell me what time it is."

Jokes

MABEL PUGH: "Mrs. Moore, you always want your kiln full of china before you begin to freeze, don't you?"

MARY GORDY: "Oh, that girl was so sick they had to take her to the hospital on an avalanche."

LOUISE WORTH: "We're studying the New Testament in Bible now."

SALLY WEBB: "Have you gotten to Matthew yet?"

LOUISE: "No, I don't believe we have gotten that far."

IDA WILLIAMS: "Are you going uptown with a Junior this afternoon, Mary Belle?"

MARY BELLE HAYS: "Junior, who is he?"

LURA FINLEY: "Smoot, this old Annual will drive me to Dix Hill yet!"

FRANCES SMOOT: "Yes, or Sing Song, one."

MRS. RAMSEY: "Don't you think 'The Fall of the House of Usher' is the most hair raising of Poe's stories?"

MR. BRAWLEY: "I don't recall many of Poe's short stories,—'The Firebug' made the most impression."

Heard in the studio garden:

NANNIE JONES: "Elizabeth, what's the name of this blue flower?"

ELIZABETH BEARDEN: "I think it's a lumbago plant."

Historical Events

Where was the "Declaration of Independence" adopted?
In Independence Hall, fourth floor Peace Institute.

When did the "War of the Revolution" occur?
When the girls refused to eat any more breakfast bacon.

How long did the "Reign of Terror" last?
As long as Miss Wallace was sick and Edith R. West was on duty.

Where is the "Arch of Triumph"?
In the northeast corner of Miss Demarest's mouth during test week.

What is the "Battle of Books"?
A satire written by Swift and dramatized by the girls in chapel
when Miss Coley answers the door.

What occurred on "Black Friday"?
Everybody was choked on fish bones.
